To the AUTHOR of the WEEKLY REGISTER.

SIR,

WITH much Ill-Nature and unbecoming Partiality, too long, in my Opinion, have our Political Prize-Fighters gone on harping upon one unmelodious String, and ranſacking Hiſtory for Examples of BAD Miniſters. Ought we not alſo once to have expoſed to our View the Picture of a GOOD Patriot; ſuch a one as would render both his Prince and the People compleatly happy! Not doubting but ſuch a Pourtrait will appear amiable in the Eyes of every diſintereſted Engliſhman, who has his Country's Welfare ſincerely at Heart, I am of Opinion, that the Incloſed may merit a Place in your Regiſter.——Horace [L. III. ODE 3.] has given us a ſublime Idea of a noble Soul, diſdainful of the pointed Arrows of Calumny and Detraction, in its own Innocence ſecure; whoſe own Words might be prefixed as a very proper Motto: But as one of our Firſt-Rate Poets has cloathed it in a moſt beautiful Engliſh Dreſs, I preſume the Copy will be more acceptable than the Original to many of our Readers, but particularly to the Fair Sex, whom you declare your ſelf peculiarly ſollicitous of obliging. I am &c. L.

The Man reſolv'd and ſteady to his Truſt,
Inflexible to Ill and obſtinately juſt,
May the rude Rabble's Inſolence deſpiſe,
Their ſenſeleſs Clamour and tumultuous Cries.
The Tyrant's Fierceneſs he beguiles,
And the ſtern Brow and the harſh Voice deſies,
And with ſuperior Greatneſs ſmiles.

Not the rough Whirlwind which deforms
Adria's black Gulph, and vexes it with Storms,
The ſtubborn Virtue of his Soul can move,
Not the red Arm of angry Jove,
That flings the Thunder from the Sky,
And gives it Rage to roar and Strength to fly:
Should the whole Frame of Nature round him break,
In Ruin and Confuſion hurl'd,
He, unconcern'd, would hear the mighty Crack,
And ſtand ſecure amidſt a falling World.

N. B. "Our obliging Correſpondent has the hearty "Thanks of our Society, for the Favour he has done us. "—But as the Piece he ſent us was, by him, tranſlated "from among the Fables of the Arch-Biſhop of Cambray, "whoſe exquiſite Works are in almoſt every Hand, and "this Piece of genuine Hiſtory is, by, his ſaid Grace of "Cambray, introduced with very much the Air of a Fable "(and, I doubt, received as ſuch by all who have not per"uſed Monſ. Tavernier, from whom that moſt learned Pre"late apparently took the Hint) I chuſe rather to give it "in its native Purity, as delivered by a Gentleman of well"known Credit, a great Traveller, and who had the Hap"pineſs to be perſonally acquainted with this worthy Perſi"an Miniſter, and at whoſe Hands he received ſeveral Fa"vours. This I do for more Reaſons than one: Viz. 1. I "have Cauſe to believe that M. Tavernier's Works are in "fewer Hands. 2. His Narrative differs in many material "Particulars from the Arch-Biſhop's, and viſibly carries "with it a Face of true Hiſtory, no Way repugnant to what "other credible Travellers relate with regard to the Eaſtern "Countries, which the Prelate's evidently does not; nor "does in the leaſt appear to be deſigned for any other than "a beautiful Romance. And, 3. It is certain, that the "Gentleman himſelf, who obliged us with the Piece (and "whoſe Pardon I beg for all theſe Liberties) takes the "Whole for a Fiction; ſince, in his Letter, he terms it, A "Perſian Tale, and expreſly ſays; To applaud Virtue and "expoſe Vice in general is the principal Aim and Beauty of "Fable. By deſcending to Particulars, Panegyric too often "becomes fulſom, and Satire odious.——Theſe Reaſons, "among others, induced me to be at the Trouble of ex"tracting [from the Hague Edition of M. Tavernier's 40 "Years Travels, P. 110.] the genuine Account of this "matchleſs Perſian, unadorned, in puris naturalibus; refer"ring to the Arch-Biſhop's Fables all ſuch as are deſirous of "peruſing the ſame Story, decked out with beautiful Soli"loquies, and embelliſhed with all the additional Graces "and Elegancies of fine Diction; and which (if required) "ſhall be inſerted in a ſucceeding Regiſter. All this I thought "proper to animadvert to my Readers;" and am,

Their obliged humble Servant, SIMEON SNARL.

THE Great Shah Abbas I, one Day hunting on a Mountain, and ſtrayed from his Followers, found a Youth playing on a Pipe, and near him a few Goats brouzing. The Monarch having asked him ſome Queſtions, he replied ſo pertinently to each Particular, without knowing to whom he ſpake, that Shah Abbas, ſurpriſed at his Repartees, made Signs to Iman-Couli Kan, Governor of Shiras, who approached, not to uſe any Expreſſion that might give the Goat-herd to underſtand, that it was the King to whom he was talking. He then went on with his Interrogations,—to all which the Lad anſwered ſo as to raiſe ſtill more and more the Monarch's Aſtoniſhment. Upon this his Majeſty inquired of the Governor; "What he "thought of that young Peaſant's Genius?" Who returned; "That if he was taught to read and write, his Opinion "was, that he might be of great Service to his Majeſty." The King immediately took the young Man by the Hand, delivering him to the Governor, with Orders to have him well inſtructed: And this Peaſant, naturally endowed with a ſprightly Wit, ſolid Judgment, and a moſt happy Memory, in a very little Time became ſo compleatly accompliſhed, and acquitted himſelf ſo well in divers Employes given him by the Governor, than on the Report made to Shah Abbas by the ſaid Kan, his Majeſty inſtantly ſent for him to Court and advanced him to the important Charge of Nazar, or Grand Maſter of the Royal Houſhold, which is the ſecond Dignity in the whole Realm, none being ſuperior except the Athemat-Doulat; which exalted Poſt in Perſia is what the Grand Vizier [Wazir Azem] is in Turkey. The Nazer has in Charge all the King's Treaſure, Jewels, Horſes, Robes and other Apparel, Gold Plate, in which the Perſian Monarchs exceed any others whatever: In ſhort, Shah Abbas could not well have made Mahamet-Ali greater. To that his Name he ſubjoined the honourable Title Begh, or Lord. [In the other Relation, he tells the King in the Mountain, that his Name was Alibeg.] Shah Abbas having thoroughly experienced his conſummate Fidelity and Conduct in every Thing he engaged in, ſent him twice to Hindoſtan, in Quality of his Embaſſador to the Grand Mogul, on both which Occaſions he was intirely well ſatisfied with his Negociations. Ali Begh (for ſo he ought now to be called) was a ſtrict Lover of Juſtice: He protected the Poor from the Inſults and Oppreſſions of the Mighty; nor was he of a Diſpoſition to ſuffer himſelf to be corrupted by Preſents; for he never took any; which (adds M. Tavernier, who was well acquainted with them) is very rare among the Mahometans. This his exemplary Integrity and Steadineſs made all the Court Grandees his Enemies, more eſpecially the Eunuchs, and Women of the Seraglio [rather Haram] who have always the King's Ear. But while Shah Abbas lived, none durſt preſume to open their Mouths againſt the Nazer, he being, with the greateſt Juſtice, too far advanced in the good Graces of his Sovereign, for them to hope doing him any Diſſervice in that Quarter. Shah Sefi, in his Minority, ſucceeding his Grand-Father, in the Perſian Throne, the Nazer's Enemies judged they might now play their Game abundantly better, and eaſily prevail on that young Prince to harbour an ill Opinion of Ali Begh's Conduct. The Eunuchs, who are continually about the King's Perſon, ceaſed not dropping Expreſſions to the Nazer's Diſadvantage; but the young Monarch ſtill made as if he did not hear them. One Day, as his Majeſty ſeemed pleaſed with examining ſome Sabres and Daggers richly ſet with Jewels, one of the Eunuchs ſaid; "That if his Majeſty would ſee a great "and precious Curioſity, he ſhould ſend for the fine Sabre "ſent to Shah Abbas by the Grand Signor, and which was "covered quite over with fine Diamonds and other coſtly "Jewels." Such a Sabre was indeed preſented by the Ottoman Emperor to Shah Abbas: But long before Ali Begh was taken into that Monarch's Service, he had cauſed it to be taken in Pieces, and the Diamonds, &c. otherwiſe employed. On the Kings ſaying; "let me ſee it;" ſeveral ran to the Nazer, and diligent Search was made in the Treaſury, for what had not been there in many Years before. The King informed that the Sabre in Queſtion was not to be found, and at the ſame Time being alſo ſhewed, in the Regiſter Book of Preſents, that ſuch a Thing had been there depoſited, he ſeemed ſomewhat out of Humour. The Eunuchs and other great Courtiers then preſent, took this Opportunity to inſpire the King with a bad Opinion of the Nazer's Conduct, and ſaid many Things greatly to his Diſcredit. Among others, they artfully repreſented to the Monarch; "That as Ali Begh, in his own Name, was "continually erecting ſeveral magnificent Caravanſeras "[large public Inns in the Cities, Towns and on the "Roads for the Accommodation of Travellers] and "Bridges, mending the Roads, &c. all at a prodigious "Expence, beſtowing princely Gifts, and had withal built "for himſelf a moſt ſtately Palace (which his Majeſty "would do well to viſit, as being well worth his ſeeing) all "which could not be done without a notable Diminution "of the Public Treaſure, for all which he ought to be "called to ſtrict Account." Matters ſtanding thus Ali Begh arrived; when the King, far from receiving him as uſual, ſpoke certain ſevere Words with relation to the Sabre which could not be found: Adding; "That it was his "Pleaſure to examine, whether every Particular mentioned "in the Regiſter was in his Treaſury; and that he gave "him 15 Days to prepare himſelf for ſuch Viſitation." Ali Begh, without the leaſt Emotion or Concern, replied; "That "his Majeſty, if he pleaſed, might inſpect his Treaſury "the very next Morning:" This Shah Sefi agreed to do; but firſt repeated; "That he allowed him 15 Days to make ready." The Day following his Majeſty went to the Treaſury, where he found every Item in moſt excellent Order. He had already got Information what became of the Sabre. Thence he went to the Reſidence of his Nazer; who made him a very moderate Preſent: It being the Cuſtom for every one whom the King honours with a Viſit, immediately to make a Preſent to his Majeſty. Shah Sefi having received what his Nazer had offered as his Welcome, went on and traverſed all the Apartments in the Houſe, and was not a little ſurpriſed at finding them all in general ſo very indifferently furniſhed; being hung only with Felt, and the Floors ſpread with ordinary Carpets; whereas in the Palaces of all Perſian Lords, they walk on no other than Carpets of Silk and Gold, and have all their other Furniture ſuitable. Shah Sefi, as they had deſcribed to him the Grandure and profuſe Magnificence of his Nazer, expected to have found his Houſe quite otherwiſe, and was aſtoniſhed to meet with ſuch Moderation in one of ſo exalted a Station. At the End of one of the Galleries was a Door faſtened with three ſtrong Chains. The King had paſſed without obſerving it: But at his Return, the Meyter [Chief of the White Eunuchs, and whom we may call his Majeſty's Lord High Chamberlain] cauſed him to take Notice of it; the Sight of which gave his Majeſty ſome Curioſity; and he inquired of Ali Begh; "What he had "in that Apartment which he kept ſo carefully ſecured?" "My Liege, returned Ali Begh, that is a Place which I "have great Reaſon to keep ſecurely locked up, ſince my "whole Treaſure is therein depoſited. All that your Ma"jeſty has ſeen in this Houſe is yours; but what is within "that Chamber is mine, and I am ſure your Majeſty will "have the Goodneſs never to deprive me of it." This Diſcourſe heightened Shah Sefi's Curioſity to ſee what was there; and having commanded Ali Begh to open the Door, his Majeſty was ſtrangely ſurprized to find only four bare Walls, without any other Ornament or Furniture than a Shepherd's Crook, reſting on two Nails in the Wall, a Scrip to hold Victuals, a tanned Skin for Water, a Pipe or Flute and a coarſe Frock, each Particular hanging againſt the Walls on different Nails. Not to leave the Monarch in the ſilent Aſtoniſhment in which he beheld him, Ali Begh beſpake him in theſe Terms: "My Sovereign! When "Shah Abbas found me on the Mountain, looking after the "Goats committed to my Care, what you ſee there is all "I was then poſſeſſed of. He took not from me any one "Part of them; neither do you, I beſeech you, deprive "me of them; but permit me to reaſſume them, and there"with to return to my primitive Occupation, the which I "ſhall receive as a ſignal Grace done me by your Majeſty." Shah Sefi, touched with ſuch uncommon Virtue, inſtantly cauſed himſelf to be ſtripped of his Garments, which he gave to Ali Begh, that being the higheſt Honour the Perſian Monarchs can ſhew to a Subject; and having had others brought him, he returned to his Palace. Ali Begh continued in his high Poſt, and long after died in it glorioufly; and his Enemies had nothing for their Pains but the Chagrin and Confuſion they underwent at their ill Succeſs in the baſe and unjuſt Conſpiracy they had laid againſt that excellent Man. Much more might be ſaid concerning this gallant Perſonage; but one Particular I cannot well omit, as being a notable Inſtance of his Juſtice and Prudence. —— Shah Sefi, returning from the Province of Guilan, incamped near Zulfa, in Armenia, where he deſigned to divert himſelf two or three Days with Hunting. Divers Courteſans conſtantly follow the Perſian Court; their Buſineſs being to amuſe the King (when ſo diſpoſed) with their Dancing, Singing and Buffooneries. One of thoſe looſe Laſſes was compleatly agreeable, and on whom the King caſt a very favourable Eye, and had already made her ſeveral noble Preſents; all which was tranſacted ſo publicly that no Perſon belonging to the Court could poſſibly be ignorant thereof: Yet, thro' a juvenile Impulſe, the Nazer's Son ſcrupled not to have this pretty Damſel brought to his Tent. He had with him another young Nobleman; but who wiſely had ſo much Command of himſelf as not to offer to touch her; as for the Nazer's Son, he lay with her; all which next Morning came to his Father's Knowledge. Ali Begh, whether out of pure Zeal for the King, or prudently to prevent incurring his Displeasure, determined to inflict a speedy and rigorous Chastisement on the Offender. Accordingly, after the Country Fashion, he caused the unhappy Youth to receive so many Bastonades on almost every Part of his Body, that his Toe Nails fell off, and he was all over scarce any other than one continued Mortification. It was with Difficulty that he escaped with Life: And Shah Sefi, when he heard of the Crime committed by the Son, and the Punishment inflicted by the Father, only said; "That Ali Begh had acted very prudently in punishing his "Son, of his own Accord, and thereby preventing the "Justice which would otherwise have followed so presumptuous an Attempt."

578

SATURDAY, October 24.

Petty*, from Philadelphia, who carried them to Jamaica.——Two Hours after this pretended Guarda Costa had taken Capt. Rawlings, they also took a French Ship, bound from Cape François in Hispaniola to France, which they plundered of Arms, Gunpowder, &c. and after detaining her about 30 Hours she was dismissed.

Yeſterday, being the Ld. Mayor's Day, that Feſtivity was ſolemnized with great Splendor, as uſual. The French Embaſſador, the Earl of Scarborough, with ſeveral other Perſons of Rank, dined with his Lordſhip. The Bridewell Boys (who for their rude and unlucky Pranks, when Sir Cha. Peers entered on his Mayoralty, had been ever ſince ſhut up every 29th of October) were, thro' his new Lordſhip's Indulgence, let out on their good Behaviour, and lined the Way at his Landing at Dorſet-Stairs up to Salisbury Square; and we hear, they were entertained with a plentiful Dinner of Roaſt-Beef and Pudding, with their Skins full, as ſome ſay, of his Lordſhip's good Beer.—— All the Miſchances we yet hear of, is that ſeveral Women were over-ſet in the Evening, and loſt Cloaks, Head-Cloaths, Pockets, &c. There was a great Bonfire in a Barge.
